

We don't "care" about the secular laws given to different people in the world - whether democratic, socialist, Islamic, republican, Shinto, Buddhist, anarchist, Indian, Creek, or whatever. Certainly, democratic laws seems formally the best, but ? Thus, it is not only the level of legislation that matters, but also respect for it, which seems particularly delicate in the so-called developed countries.

We care about this - Why are you upset with someone who doesn't break the laws, rules, regulations or customs in the way? The fact that he's different? That he's special?! That he does what the so-called majority society doesn't do? So what, anyone can do whatever they want as long as they don't break the laws, be they socialist, Islamic, democratic or whatever. Why are you irritated by them and why are you not irritated by those who actually violate laws or appear to do so. Why do you turn your eyes away here, not examining what the reality is, but in a person who is merely different, you look and observe what they might possibly violate? Why don't you mind the so-called physically or mentally handicapped who are clearly different and special and why do normal people who are just different, who have different ways, habits, by which they don't break the given laws and don't even damage the visible, but on the contrary create new visible ones, irritate you so much?

Why do you protect and defend the so-called handicapped and the so-called normal ones with different ways irritate you? Why do you insist on the presumption of guilt for the obviously aggressive people who are in the vast majority subsequently convicted by the courts, and why do you not insist on the presumption of guilt for the (falsely accused) people who will then be in the vast majority cleared by the courts? Why do you insist on laws for people who don't obey the laws and why do you submit to lawlessness those who obey the laws? See John 7:51 Nicodemus - does our law condemn anyone before it first hears him? Why are you irritated by those who do not accept your "good", your ways, who politely reject you (according to the Constitutional right to reject without giving reasons). And on the other hand, why do people let others tell them what they do, paint or create, if they do not violate the given secular laws? And then they get angry - sic!

Watch out for them! They are appeasing some aggressors in order to be calm and persecuting the innocent. When we speak up, they accuse us of being conflicted!

So let's leave them alone, thanks to IHS Cross. That would end up with us rejecting the polite ones and appeasing the rude, blinded ones in vain. However, they will also go the IHS Way as we do when they need Grace from IHS allowance - then the above will not bother them - thus let them be until they grow up.

For we do not seek ourselves, but Mutuality. To seek G-d's Will, to seek G-d's Face, can only be done by the Holy Spirit in the IHS Wounds - ever more gentle and firm thanks to the IHS of the Shaking with us. Amen
